ENGEL FAMILY FARMS

A History with Deep Roots in Agriculture

Around 1890, Augustuv Engel decided to move his farming family from Germany to the United States. After a farm sale, he packed up his wife and five children and they started their journey. Upon arrival at the port, they found they were a day late and their passenger ship had sailed away. After finding a job and passage for his family on a freighter ship, their passage began. Due to poor living conditions, only his wife and two children survived the trip. They later learned that the passenger ship they originally had tickets for was lost at sea. One of the children who survived the trip was Kevin's great-grandfather. Settling in south central Illinois, the Engel family began their farming legacy in the United States. Kevin's grandfather, August Engel, farmed in Farina, Illinois where he and his wife Lidia had 16 children, the 5th child being Carol Engel (Kevin's father). Carol Engel (Bud) married Marie Furrow and moved to Virginia in 1949 to manage a farm for the son of the family doctor in Farina, Illinois. Following that job, Carol took a second farm management job in King William County. After working on the farm Kevin's dad managed, he decided to form his own operation. In 1991, Kevin and his wife Denise started Engel Farms Inc. Today, the Engels farm ground in over 14 counties in Virginia, stretching from Chesapeake to Albemarle.

ADVANCED AGRONOMY EDUCATION

Virginia Cooperative Extension and the Natural Resources Conservation Service will host the Advanced Agronomy Education Area during the 2026 VA AG EXPO at the Meadow Event Park in Doswell, VA. The Agronomy Education Area will showcase a wide range of research, technologies, and hands-on learning opportunities from Virginia's agronomy and natural resource experts. Attendees will explore precision agriculture tools, variable-rate fertility management, drones, weed identification displays, and the latest crop research findings, including corn hybrid and small grain variety trials, soybean production, cotton and corn research, and biochar studies.

Interactive exhibits will highlight soybean processing and growth stages, cover crops, plant diagnostics, insect management, and current entomology research. Visitors can also learn about deer repellency efficacy research in soybeans, cotton, and corn through educational displays and demonstrations.

Soil health and conservation will be featured through engaging activities presented by the Virginia Soil Health Coalition, including rainfall simulation demonstrations, soil slake tests, the "Soil Your Undies" challenge, and displays showcasing the four principles of soil health. Additional exhibits will include soil profile demonstrations with NRCS soil scientists, root boxes displaying actively growing cover crops, and opportunities to learn about farmer-led conservation initiatives through the VANTAGE and ICA partnership.

Together, these exhibits will provide practical, research-based information and hands-on experiences designed to help producers improve productivity, profitability, and environmental stewardship.

Make plans today to stop by and pick up tips to help your farming operation.

Welcome to the 2026 Virginia Ag Expo!

On behalf of the Virginia Grain Producers Association, I want to personally thank you for spending your day with us. Whether this is your first Ag Expo or you've attended for years, we're glad you're here.

Agriculture is built on relationships, and the VA Ag Expo is one of the few opportunities each year where farmers, industry partners, researchers, educators, and agricultural leaders can come together in one place. It is a chance to see new ideas in action, learn from one another, and have conversations that help move our industry forward.

As farmers, we know that every season brings its own set of challenges and opportunities. The decisions we make today impact not only our operations, but also the future of agriculture in the Commonwealth. Events like Ag Expo allow us to explore new technologies, hear about emerging research, and connect with the people who are working every day to support Virginia agriculture.

I encourage you to take time to visit the exhibitors, attend demonstrations, ask questions, and reconnect with old friends while making a few new ones along the way. The knowledge shared and relationships built here often become some of the most valuable takeaways from the day.

I would also like to thank our sponsors, exhibitors, volunteers, and planning partners for their commitment to making this event possible. Their support helps ensure that the VA Ag Expo continues to provide meaningful value to Virginia's farming community.

Most importantly, thank you for being here and for everything you do to support agriculture across the Commonwealth. I hope you enjoy your time and leave with new ideas, new connections, and renewed confidence in the future of our industry.

Safe travels, and have a great day at the VA Ag Expo!

Tyler Oliver
President
Virginia Grain Producers Association

Supporters and Attendees of the 2026 Ag Expo:

On Behalf of the Virginia Soybean Association, I would like to warmly welcome you all to the 2026 VA Ag Expo here at Meadow Event Park in Doswell. We are very grateful for the cooperation from the folks here and the wonderful environment that they have provided so that we can all enjoy one of Virginia's largest gatherings of our wonderful producers, industry professionals and members of ag-focused State Agencies from all over the Commonwealth. We also want to extend a sincere thank you to our industry partners that have generously allocated resources to help sponsor this event and bring everyone who attends the best and most impactful experience possible.

As with every year, 2026 has provided us with its own set of unique challenges. Prolonged drought and roller coaster temperature swings, market volatility in both grain markets and fuel / fertilizer and an ever-present pressure on farmland from real-estate development, data centers and green-energy initiatives. However, as with every other year, the backbone of our State's leading industry, our Farmers, Cattlemen and Foresters rose to the occasion and planted, managed, and will hopefully harvest a crop with the faith and attention to detail independent of the headwinds of the market and the environment they produce in. I would like to thank those folks personally for their commitment to their trade and their continued passion for everything that is agriculture in our great Commonwealth. They are the reason that we get to enjoy events like this in Virginia.

Finally, I would like to thank Meadow Event Park and Engel Family Farms for hosting us, and our sponsors and exhibitors who make this event possible. We certainly hope that you all enjoy and find value in this year's event and once again thank you for attending! We wish you a bountiful, successful, and safe harvest as we work toward Fall.

Thank You,
Ian Walker, President
Virginia Soybean Association

Dear Friends of Virginia Agriculture,

It's a pleasure to welcome you to the 2026 Virginia Ag Expo. This has been a truly challenging year for farms and agricultural communities across Virginia – and that's one reason gatherings like this are so valuable. They give us a chance to connect, share perspectives, see new ideas and technologies, and find solutions worth taking home.

At Virginia Tech, our best and most important work begins by listening to and being the best partners we can be alongside Virginia's agricultural community. For more than 150 years, that partnership has fundamentally framed how we serve the commonwealth. Through the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station, and Virginia Cooperative Extension, we educate future agricultural leaders, develop relevant and impactful research-based solutions, and bring new knowledge to producers and communities across Virginia.

Events like the Virginia Ag Expo are an important part of that partnership. They give us the chance to hear directly from you to ensure our research, teaching, and outreach continue to be responsive to the needs of Virginia agriculture.

I encourage you to stop by our exhibits while you are here. We welcome the opportunity to learn about the challenges and opportunities you are facing and to continue the conversations that guide our work, and most importantly, guide our ability to provide impactful support.

My thanks to the Virginia Grain Producers Association, the Virginia Soybean Association, and Virginia Cooperative Extension for making this outstanding event possible.

Most of all, thank you for the work you do every day to strengthen agriculture and the communities it supports. We appreciate the opportunity to work alongside you, and I wish you a productive and rewarding Virginia Ag Expo.

Sincerely,

VA AG EXPO Attendees:

The College of Agriculture at Virginia State University is pleased to welcome you to this year's Virginia Ag Expo.

Each year, this event provides a special opportunity to celebrate agriculture's role as the backbone of Virginia's economy and a vital force in shaping the future of our communities, our food systems, and our environment.

Virginia State University has a proud legacy as an 1890 Land-Grant Institution, committed to advancing innovation and opportunity in agriculture for more than a century. Through the College of Agriculture, we are making meaningful impacts across the Commonwealth, supporting small and historically underserved farmers, training the next generation of agricultural leaders, and advancing research and outreach that improve lives.

From our Small Farm Outreach Program and our Agricultural Research Station to our Center for Sustainable and Renewable Resources and the new Institute for Regenerative Agriculture and Resilient Food Systems, VSU is deeply engaged in helping Virginia producers thrive in a changing world. Our programs are rooted in community, driven by science, and powered by a mission to ensure equitable access to knowledge and opportunity for all Virginians.

We are also proud of our continued work in precision agriculture, climate-smart practices, and youth engagement through programs like 4-H, and our summer academies. Our students, faculty, and Cooperative Extension team are deeply committed to building a future where agriculture is inclusive, sustainable, and resilient.

On behalf of the entire VSU College of Agriculture, I want to thank Engel Family Farms for hosting this year's Virginia Ag Expo and express appreciation to the Virginia Grain Producers Association and the Virginia Soybean Association for co-sponsoring this important gathering.

We are honored to be here with you working together for the future of Virginia agriculture.

Thank You to Our 2026 VA AG EXPO Community

The 2026 VA AG EXPO was a success because of the many individuals, organizations, and businesses that came together to support Virginia agriculture. On behalf of the VA AG EXPO Team, thank you for being part of another outstanding event.

To our sponsors, thank you for your generous investment in the VA AG EXPO. Your support makes it possible to provide an educational, engaging, and successful event for Virginia's agricultural community.

We also extend our sincere appreciation to the dedicated staff at Meadow Event Park, the Virginia Cooperative Extension, the Virginia Grain Producers Association (VGPA), the Virginia Soybean Association (VSA), the Virginia Corn, Small Grains and Soybean Checkoff Boards, Engel Family Farms, our planning committee, volunteers, and event staff. Your commitment, expertise, and countless hours of work behind the scenes made this event possible.

Finally, thank you to everyone who attended the 2026 VA AG EXPO. Whether you joined us as a producer, agribusiness professional, student, educator, or supporter of Virginia agriculture, your participation helped make the day both meaningful and memorable.

The connections made, knowledge shared, and partnerships strengthened during this year's event will continue to benefit Virginia agriculture well into the future. We look forward to welcoming you back for the next VA AG EXPO. If you have comments or suggestions to help us improve future events, we would love to hear from you. Please contact us at vaagexpo@gmail.com.
